What is a Collective Kitchen:

A collective kitchen is a small group of people who pool their resources to make healthy, low cost, and delicious food in bulk that they take home to share with their families. Fun and friendships flourish in these kitchens.

be unable to participate in this healthy initiative. Most of these funds help cover the cost of childcare, transportation, and a small honorarium for the leader. The remainder is matching food dollars.

Who is involved with Collective Kitchens:

Collective kitchens are open to anyone interested in cooking in a group setting and learning about good food. No one is excluded. CHEP, Saskatoon Health Region, the Community Clinic and community leaders make up the Collective Kitchen Partnership. The partnership works together to organize and fund collective kitchens.

Where are Collective Kitchens held:

Collective kitchens operate at various locations in Saskatoon. They are usually run out of community kitchens found in schools and churches.

What is the cost of a Collective Kitchen:

The cost of a collective kitchen varies depending on such things as the size of the families, type of food cooked, and childcare. The cost is shared between members of the group and the partnership. Without some financial support, most groups would
